Free health care is when you give health services to citizens in a nation with little to no cost. The ideal case is [REDACTED] is at question! The respective government must work hard in order to provide this policy.

The advantages of free health care

According to McClure (2017), in free-market structures, the rich individuals are the ones medical providers target. This means poor segments [REDACTED] health care. In the free health care system, anyone [REDACTED] of how much they actually have.

The health of the employers in a country is also increased. This kind of system makes seeing a [REDACTED] doctor visits; consequentially decreasing diseases that stem from doctor avoidance due to high prices charged.

Management fees are reduced as well; [REDACTED] with private insurers. Less staff are employed and third parties due to direct dealings of government and doctors or nurses (PressBooks, 2021)

The disadvantages of free health care

Kandle (2020) tell us paying medical fees for strangers is a big disadvantage. Around 85 % of fees linked [REDACTED] linked to the lifestyles of an individual. This means people who live a healthy lifestyle [REDACTED] of their reckless peers, meaning an unfair tax is enforced.

Secondly, the country will quickly enter debt due to the national budget mainly being [REDACTED] 40 % of the Canada national budget is for health, when you involve corrupt leaders in third world [REDACTED] like in South Africa—where kick-backs can be common.

Lastly, according to a recent study, “It leads to reduced motivation in providing innovation in the health sector. [REDACTED] decreased, there will not be much-pushing innovation" (Kaplan & Porter, 2011).
